FURNITURE CARE

We treat our black walnut, black cherry, and sugar maple furniture with several coats of oil/wax, leaving the surface glass smooth when it exits the Winooski Vermont factory. These oil finished pieces develop a deep, rich color, bringing out the beauty of the grain that only natural hardwoods can deliver. In time, the oil finish will develop a rich patina. When the pieces arrive on your doorstep they should be ready to use. However, in some cases due to extreme truck conditions it may have dried out a bit, picked up dust, or been rubbed by packaging. In addition, if the trucks are unusually hot, some of the finish may seep back out of the wood pores and dry on the surface. The furniture is beautiful when it leaves Winooski, but it is possible that a touchup is needed when it arrives.

To maintain the furniture, re-oiling is advised. How often you do this depends on the conditions in your home and your personal preference. If the conditions are drier and the furniture appears to lack moisture, then it may be time to consider oiling. The more often oil is applied, the stronger and richer the finish.

For our black cherry and black walnut pieces, we recommend a commercial product that is almost identical to what we use in the factory - WATCO® Danish oil in the color natural. This can also be used with the WATCO® finishing wax in the color natural to add an extra layer of protection. These products are available at Home Depot, Lowe's, and online retailers.

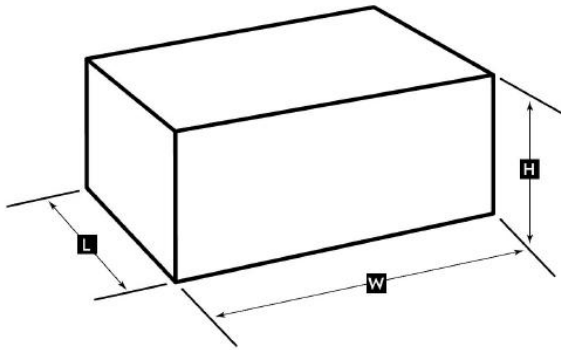

When refinishing, the oil should be applied liberally with a rag, taking care to not drip on carpet or unfinished floors. If there are any rough spots, use very fine (0000) steel wool to remove them. Rub the steel wool lightly with the grain while the furniture is still covered with wet oil, then carefully rub dry with a cloth. Do not let the oil dry on the surface as it will become sticky.

Additional coats of oil may be applied as necessary. Once a year oiling is recommended, although not required. The more often oil is applied, the stronger and richer the patina.
